CANADA'S LOYALTY TO ENGLAND IS NOT MENAGED

Secretary Knox Says Annexation Not Remotely Probable.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 16.—Though the people of the United States and Canada are "a substantially homogeneous people" with "deep moral and racial reciprocities," the benefits of the proposed commercial reciprocity with Canada "ought not to be obscured by the fear of relations too cordial and conceivably dangerous to the great Canadian loyalty to England," is the opinion of the secretary of state, Philander C. Knox, who addressed the Chicago Association of Commerce here tonight.

Annexation Not Probable.
Mr. Knox declared that while migrations proceeded as constantly and as freely between Canada and the United States as between two states of this country, and while the two peoples have been waiting together for two centuries, "there is not the slightest probability that this racial and moral union will involve any political change or annexation or absorption."

"It is an ethnological fact that political units of the English-speaking people never lose their autonomy," said Secretary Knox. "Like bees, they give off their swarms who set up for themselves independently, but they do not make political combinations among themselves."

"Since the revolution there has been almost undisturbed peace and amity between the two countries, and, however governmental changes may have been brought in the past, it is probably more true today than ever before that the weight of sentiment and opinion, both in Canada and in the United States, while desiring closer relations in all other respects, is crystallized in a belief that the present political separation is desirable and will lead to the best development of each nation and to better and more satisfactory relations between them.

Would Naturally Act Together.
"In the higher atmosphere and broader aspects of the situation it is certain that if there should be any great world movement involving this continent Canada and the United States would, as a matter of course, act in the most perfect concert in defense of the common rights of a common blood and civilization."

Declaring, however, that the reciprocity proposition was "economic, not political," Mr. Knox asserted: "The United States recognizes with satisfaction that the dominion of Canada is a permanent North American political unit, and that her autonomy is secure. The United States appreciates the advantage to the common welfare of the continent that Canada contributes her own strength plus the strength of Great Britain."

Secretary Knox prefaced his argument allaying fears of Canadian annexation with an outline of the trade relations between the United States and Canada to the work of the present administration and then remarked that "for more than half a century the statesmen of Canada, of Great Britain and of the United States have by repeated effort testified and reaffirmed an abiding and fundamental belief in the principle of American-Canadian reciprocity."

Efforts to Secure Reciprocity.
Sketching briefly the negotiations between Canada and the United States from the time of the passage of the reciprocity treaty of 1854 and its abrogation in 1866, Mr. Knox spoke of the subsequent efforts on both sides of the line to promote reciprocal trade, the Canadian pilgrimages to Washington, "the cold reception given the eminent Canadians who made those pilgrimages and the appeal to imperial and political sentiment by their opponents at home."

"Our task was, despite all this," continued Mr. Knox, "to submit to the people of the United States and to the people of Canada an opportunity to cement the commercial links which it is the duty of the government to maintain."

"The result, it is comprehensive in principle and avoids the objection which was one cause of the abrogation of the Elgin-Marcy treaty of 1854—that it is not limited to one class of commodities. It is meant for the conditions of today and the conditions of the future. It seeks by providing for the freest possible interchange of commodities across a political boundary, which, when it comes to production and commerce, is an artificial boundary, to prevent those manipulations and those speculative fluctuations in prices which are harmful both to the producer and to the consumer. It may be stated as an axiom that the more abundant the source of supply and the more free the movement of products the less chance there is of decreasing the legitimate profits of the producer and of increasing the cost to the consumer by artificial scarcity."

Special regard for "the great class of agricultural producers, for the market offered by Canada to this country and the market offered by the United States to Canada, and for 'the legitimate expansion of our manufacturing industries' was given during the recent negotiations, added Mr. Knox, in explaining the reductions on all classes of agricultural implements, the free admission of cottonseed oil into Canada, the exempting from duty of all fruits and vegetables and other agricultural products, of which some sections have a surplus at certain seasons. The benefits are generally distributed, in Mr. Knox's opinion, and "no permanent injury to any producing class is apprehended."

ATWELL WORKING FOR THE RELEASE OF DR. C. S. HARLE
United States district attorney, W. H. Atwell, of Dallas, Tex., was in the city for a short time, returning from his tour to his home.
He has interested himself in a sensational case, and one that is familiar to all residents of Chihuahua. He is working for the release of Dr. C. S. Harle who was convicted some eight or ten years ago at Chihuahua of murder, by poison, with the object of defrauding the New York Life Insurance company, and is now serving out a life sentence in a dungeon at Fuerte de Uluoa, Veracruz.

TITLE CONFIRMED TO DONA ANA ACREAGE

Refugio Colony Titles Are Corrected in Bill Passed
By Congress.

The measure confirming title to the lands in the Refugio Colony grant of Dona Ana county, has now become a law. It has passed both houses and been signed by the president. This bill gives title to all those who purchased land supposedly under the grant and were later ruled out of the confines of the grant when it was patented by the U. S. land office. As these purchasers were innocent parties and believed they were buying in the Refugio Colony grant, the bill was passed to give them adequate relief and correct their titles.

The bill does not attempt to settle the dispute between Texas and Mexico over the land. It merely gives title to the land known to be in Dona Ana county. Many hundreds of acres of this land, about which there is no question of its location in New Mexico, are affected under the bill just passed and the title will soon be cleared up.

The Bill.
"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that in all cases where persons have made a claim or claims to land in Dona Ana county, New Mexico, by virtue of or under color or bona fide claim of right or title derived from the Mexican land grant, known as the Refugio Colony grant, in said county, and which grant was confirmed by the final decree of the court of private land claims, rendered in 1902, and where such person or persons in good faith and for a valuable consideration have purchased such lands and occupied and improved the same prior to the rendition of said decree, in the bona fide belief that said lands were embraced in and a part of said grant and which lands were excluded therefrom by the final survey of said grant ordered by said court, and where said persons, their assigns, and successors in interest have used, improved, and continued in the actual possession of the same as according to the lines of the original purchase, and where no valid adverse right or title (except of the United States) exists, such occupants, claimants, or purchasers may make entry and the commissioner of the general land office shall cause patents to issue for the same, after having such lands surveyed under existing laws, on payment of the fees and commissions required on original homestead entries, upon first making proof of the facts as required in this section, under regulations to be provided by the commissioner of the general land office, joint entries being admissible by cotenants, proprietors to such an extent as will enable them to adjust their respective boundaries: Provided, that the right to make entry herein given shall not extend to lands containing mines of gold, silver, copper, or other valuable minerals; and provided, that whenever it shall be made to appear by petition from the occupants of such land that injury to the permanent improvements would result from running the lines of the public survey through such permanent improvements, the commissioner of the general land office may recognize existing lines of subdivisions.

"Sec. 2. That the commissioner of the general land office is hereby authorized to render to the claimants under this act such assistance as he may deem necessary in the matter of the preparation and submission of proofs, laws, and all actual expenses incurred by clerks of the general land office or others detailed by the commissioner in rendering the necessary assistance to such claimants, including per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence, may be paid from the appropriation for expenses of inspectors, general land office."

In addition to this bill a patent, has been issued to the portion confirmed by the court of claims.

History of Refugio Grant.
In 1848 the Mexican government appointed Ramon Ortiz, a Catholic priest, special commissioner to allot land for colonization purposes along the Rio Grande. A party of Mexican citizens, headed by Jose Maria Garcia, made application and the tract of land known as the Refugio colony grant, which was then a part of the state of Coahuila, Mex., but later acquired under the Gadsden purchase by the United States from Mexico, and now a part of New Mexico, was surveyed and delivered to them by Ortiz.

Under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo the United States government agreed to protect the grantees, or their successors in interest, that were found to be within the Gadsden purchase; in 1878 the Refugio colony made application to the surveyor general of New Mexico, for an official survey of the lands; in the same year Elkins and Marmon, deputy United States surveyors, were appointed by the surveyor general to make that survey, which was later approved by him, but
